PREFACE.

THE collection of Indian Prehistoric and Protohistoric Antiquities referred to in the following pages was formed by the late Mr. R. Bruce Foote, F.G.S., during the course of a long residence in India. Mr. Foote joined the Geological Survey of India in September 1858, and retired as Senior Superintendent of the Survey thirty-three years later. The greater part of his service was spent in Southern India, the geology and palæontology of which he did much to elucidate by his investigations and writings. After his retirement he served for some years as State Geologist, Baroda, and as Director of the Geological Department, Mysore State.

By the discovery of palæolithic implements near Madras, in 1863, Mr. Foote became the pioneer of this branch of research in India, one in which he was later a recognised authority. During his long connection with the Geological Survey the ordinary routine of work entailed prolonged tours over a considerable part of Southern India, and much of his leisure was occupied in collecting all available material which tended to throw light on the habits and culture of prehistoric man. An extensive collection was thus accumulated, consisting for the most part of specimens found by Mr. Foote in the Madras Presidency and the neighbouring States of Mysore and Hyderābād, but also in Baroda and other parts of Northern India; to these personal finds a few others from various Indian localities and from Ceylon were presented by friends, or added by exchange.

The entire collection was purchased by the Madras Government in 1904, and a special room was built for its reception in the Art and Ethnological Section of the Madras Museum. At the same time it was arranged that a descriptive catalogue of the collection should be prepared for publication by Mr. Foote. By the end of 1908 the specimens had been numbered and arranged, but the completion of the catalogue was retarded by ill-health and failing eyesight which clouded the remaining years of Mr. Foote's life.

Mr. Foote died on 29th December 1912, aged seventy-eight years. The catalogue had already passed through several proofs which were revised by the author, but a considerable amount of revision has still been found necessary. On checking the numbered specimens in the collection with the corresponding entries in the Catalogue Raisonné, it was found that some of the former were missing, and as all efforts to trace them have failed they are indicated by an asterisk prefixed to the catalogue number. On the other hand a certain number of specimens were found in the collection bearing numbers which do not appear in the catalogue, and such of these as could not with certainty be referred to any of the missing exhibits are shown in a case placed at the end of the series.

The catalogue appears in two volumes, the first of which is a descriptive list of the objects in the collection, arranged according to the districts and localities in which they were found. The second volume includes the author's notes on the ages and distribution of the antiquities, the plates and map, the general index and certain addenda written by Mr. Foote shortly before his death.

ABBREVIATIONS AND TECHNICAL WORDS EMPLOYED IN THE NOTES AND CATALOGUE.

The numerals 1, 2, 3 or 4 after the descriptive name of celts, or other neolithic objects, indicate the stage of manufacture to which the specimen had been advanced by the original maker.

"1" signifies "chipped" or the first stage.

"2" signifies "pecked" or the second stage, when the angles of the several chippings had been broken down by pecking or hammering with a pointed stone, to reduce the quantity of material to be removed by grinding.

"3" signifies that the object had reached the third stage, by being ground by friction in grooves generally found in the solid rock, in the manufacturing sites.

"4" signifies polishing by which the implement was completed for use.

E.W.=Earthenware.

T.B.=Travellers' Bungalow.

F.B.=A bowl in shape like a modern finger glass or bowl.

B.I., B.O.=Black inside or black outside.

B.=Black.

R.=Red.

$\frac{B}{R}$ . =Black over Red.

R.I.=Red inside.

The black and red colours often shade into each other, the black more frequently occurring in the upper part of the vessel and the red in the lower, presumably from the lower part having been better fired. Other colours as red-brown and brown are occasionally seen shading into the red and much less often into the black.

Sangam is the junction of two rivers, e.g., the Narsipur sangam, the junction of the Cauvery and Kabbani, at Narsipur in Mysore.

"Ownership markings," scratchings on the surface of the finished vessel very various in shape.

The word "Vessel" is used when the specimen was too fragmentary to allow of a definite name being applied to it.

"Tuyère" (French), an earthenware cylinder, large or small, used to protect the nozzle of bellows against the action of fire. The tuyères themselves are frequently found fused at their points.

"Joint planes," fissures caused by shrinkage of heated rock masses, which very often give rise to the production of forms very suitable for chipping into celts and kindred implements. Pieces of trap rock with several convenient joint planes were much sought for by the celt makers, in order to save themselves great labour.

"Cacholongs," dark siliceous stones, the surfaces of which have become hydrated by weather action and have assumed a white or grey colour.

"Ar," short for aru (Tamil), a river.

"Er," short for eru (Telugu), a river.

Prant, a district or province, Gujarati term.

Tappas, small outlying tracts of territory in Gujarat and Kathiawar.

"Selected stones," stones foreign to the locality where found and brought from a distance to be manufactured into flakes, scrapers, etc. They are often of bright and pleasing colours.

Slip, a coating of colour wash applied to pottery.

Linchet, a small clearing on the top or sides of a generally rocky hill, frequently covered with turf and often revetted on its lower slope. Such clearings are common on the castellated granite hills in the Deccan.

The terms used to describe the material of which the neolithic celts and larger implements have been manufactured are only popular, being descriptive of their external appearance and not strictly petrological. Their exact determination was impossible, as the specimens could not be broken to furnish fragments convertible into sections for microscopical examination.

By the term Basalt, a very close-grained dense black rock is meant which might perhaps be called a diabase petrologically.

The name Diorite is given to a distinctly coarse granular material, showing two principal constituents slightly different in colour, blackish and grey.

Hornblendic schist is a name descriptive of a very fine grained delicately laminated rock, generally dark black in colour and showing a high polish in well finished specimens.

Trappoid is material intermediate between basalt and diorite and generally of black colour.

Greenstone is a greenish variety of diorite.

As it is necessary in some cases to give definite names to the colours of the specimens, I refer wherever possible to the tints shown by the dry cakes of water-colours in a colour box, e.g., yellow ochre, raw sienna, burnt sienna, etc., but there are of course many specimens of intermediate shades which have to be indicated by description, as for example chocolate, brown sienna (intermediate between raw and burnt sienna), etc.

The arrangement of the specimens is geographical, and the plates referred to will be found in the volume of Notes on the Ages and Distribution of the Indian Prehistoric and Protohistoric Antiquities in the FOOTE COLLECTION.

INDIAN PREHISTORIC AND PROTOHISTORIC ANTIQUITIES.

TINNEVELLY DISTRICT.

1. Scraper, oval, basalt, rolled, on the surface; found by self, Saidangannallur, Tambraparni Valley; 11th January 1883.

NOTE.—The specimens from Nos. 2 to 73a were found by myself on the 5th February 1883 at Sawyerpuram about 11 miles S.W. of Taticorin on an old surface of dark red loam from which wind action had removed the sand of the Teri. The specimens all belong to the neolithic age.

MADURA DISTRICT.

74. Carved bone pendant, greyish white; washed out of the submerged forest at Valimukkam, Ramnad; found by self on the 16th February 1883. Figured in Plate 46.
75. Flake? scraper; chert; dirty brown and grey mottled. Glossy surface; shingle bed; Mantapasale; found by self on the 23rd January 1882.
76. Do. ? yellowish grey. Weathered. ibid.
77. Do. ?; chert, mottled, brown ochre. ibid.
78. Mace-head; ringstone?  $\frac{1}{2}$  surface; Vellalankulam, south of Madura; found by self in January 1882; gneiss. Well drilled, but bore not quite central. Neolithic. Weathered.
79. Scraper; surface; ibid.; dull red, granular quartz. Part of a pebble.
80. Saw, 7-toothed; chert, brown, edge of a thick flake; river gravel; Tirupatur, Sivaganga Zamindari; found by self in 1882. Figured in Plate 15.
81. Flake, surface; worked? Tirumangalam; found by self in 1882; dull yellow; granular quartz.
82. Palæolith; surface; Aviyur, found by self on the 9th January 1882; dirty brown chert? Made of a pebble.
- „ a. Worked stone? a slingstone? brown chert; surface of lateritic gravel; Manamadura; found by self.
- „ b. Vase, lip of, or of large lid; from cairn near Kodaikanal, Palni hills; found by Mr. C. Michie Smith; earthenware, black polished; fragment. Probably part of a vase lid.
- „ c. Vessel, side of, large; from cairn near Kodaikanal; found by Mr. C. Michie Smith; earthenware, coarse, red brown. Fillet of finger tip impressions.

TANJORE DISTRICT.

83. Palæolith ? from near Vanganum Kudi Kad, south-east of Vallam, Tanjore; found by self; yellowish-red chert. Weathered, ill-shaped.
84. Do. scraper; ? from near Vanganum Kudi Kad, south-east of Vallam, Tanjore; found by self, dark and creamy chert. Weathered, ill-shaped.
85. Drilled stone; surface; Adirampatnam, Tanjore; found by self in 1878; light grey clay slate. Age uncertain.

TRICHINOPOLY DISTRICT.

86. Celt, neolithic, front half; surface; Uta Kovil, Udayarpalaiyam. Trichinopoly; found by self in 1878; light grey trap.
87. Palæolith, oval; on surface of the laterite; Ninniyur, Udayarpalaiyam; found by self in 1878; yellowish drab, chert? Point wanting.
88. Do. pointed oval; ibid.; chert? Covered with a ferruginous glaze; found by self in 1878. Figured in Plate 2.

MALABAR DISTRICT.

89. Celt; made of pale granulite; found on surface at foot of Kanyakod Hill, Malabar, by Mr. Philip Lake, G.S.I., who gave it to me. Well-shaped, polished, and well preserved. Figured in Plate 3.

SALEM DISTRICT.

NOTE.—The specimens from Nos. 90 to 172 include celts, axe-hammers, slickstones and mace heads ploughed up from the fields on the Shevaroy hills by the Makialis, or hillmen, who regard the celts as thunderbolts and worship them as phalli. All of neolithic age.

90. Celt; hornblendic gneiss. Weathered, but still glossy. Figured in Plate 3. The series exhibited was obtained by Mr. E. A. Qarme, from some deserted villages.
91. Do. hornblendic gneiss.
